The RF plan of a cellular communication system has two objectives: coverage and capacity.

The main objectives of RF point-to-point communication systems (Microwave systems) is line of sight and capacity.

Coverage relates to the geographical footprint within the system that has sufficient RF signal strength to provide for a call/data session. Line of sight (LoS) is the electromagnetic radiation between two stations that have a direct view of each other without obstacles. Capacity relates to the capability of the system to sustain a given number of subscribers. In term of microwave systems, capacity refers the complex measurement of the maximum amount of data that may be transferred over a link.
